Safer Wales believes that everyone has the right to be safe and to live their lives without fear. We have a strong and successful history of partnership working, including the co-location of individuals and teams. People and communities are at the heart of Safer Wales: the people we support; people employed by Safer Wales and partner agencies we work with. Working in such a collaborative way, informed by the knowledge, experience and research gained by our teams is essential to the continued delivery of high quality, innovative services, whilst helping to influence policy and effect change to services for vulnerable people. We are proud of our strong partnership working routes and are flexible and versatile enough to respond rapidly to changing need.

People working for Safer Wales are involved in shaping and developing our policy and practice and we place a great emphasis on people working across teams. If you join us, you will be able to play your part in continuously improving our services as we learn from our own experience and others.

There is so much more to say about Safer Wales, but if you apply for one of our posts and come for interview, staff will tell you more about what it feels like to work with us.

Good luck with your application.

Yours sincerely,

Bernie Bowen-Thomson
